The following pages offer a brief history of the development of the Commission system in
New York

Before there was a Commission...

Court on the Judiciary

(Ad hoc court for discipline of higher court judges)

Appellate Divisions

(Discipline of lower court judges)

No permanent judicial disciplinary staff,
office or procedures

Temporary Commission (1974)

1974: New York State Legislature created a Temporary State Commission on Judicial Conduct, with limited authority to investigate complaints and recommend action against judges for engaging in misconduct. The Commission's authority was expanded by constitutional amendments in 1976 and 1978 (following pages).

A large, light blue arrow pointing to the right, spanning the width of the slide. It has a white outline and three blue circular markers along its top edge.

1960: California is first to create a judicial disciplinary commission.

Today: All 50 states and the District of Columbia have a judicial disciplinary commission of some sort.

Constitutional Amendment (1976)

- 9 Commission Members

- Powers:

- ❖ Investigate complaints
- ❖ Privately Admonish Judges
- ❖ Commence Hearings before Court on the Judiciary and Appellate Division
- ❖ Courts decide whether to Censure, Suspend or Remove Judges from office

2nd Constitutional Amendment

(1978)

- 11 Commission Members instead of 9
- Powers:
 - ❖ Investigate complaints
 - ❖ Conduct formal disciplinary hearings
 - ❖ Determine that a judge be publicly admonished, censured, removed from office, retired for disability
 - ❖ Decisions are final unless disciplined judge seeks review in Court of Appeals
